NUMBER 15

For a man of the age of seventy, Judge Conger can take a remarkably fine somersault. But few men at forty would undertake the feat which Judge Conger has so successfully accomplished.

The editor of the Beloit Outlook confesses that the scurrilous editorial articles in his paper on Mr. Bennett, were written by Mr. Bennett's personal enemies in Janesville. It seems to us that the Outlook is going a long way from home to get a mad machine.

Mrs. Marshall Field, of Chicago, has adopted a very happy plan of securing a liberal contribution to the fund of St. Luke's Hospital in that city. Mme. Gerster has consented to sing at Mrs. Field's residence next Tuesday afternoon for the hospital. Three hundred invitations have been issued, and the price of admission will be $10. Of course all the invitations will be accepted, and the fund of St. Luke's Hospital greatly enriched.

There comes a report from Moorhead, Minnesota, that Mr. G. W. Roberts, formerly of this paper, and latterly the business manager of the Milwaukee Sentinel, is doing a good business in publishing the Evening News, a daily newspaper recently started in that young and thrifty city by himself and Mr. J. A. Truesdell, formerly of Beloit. There is a strong hope among Mr. Roberts' friends here and elsewhere that his success will be permanent. Mr. Roberts is a practical newspaperman thoroughly acquainted with the details of all the branches of the business, and has the ability to make a complete success of the Evening News at Moorhead, so far as his portion of the responsibility is concerned. We trust, in common with his many friends here and in Milwaukee, that the business men will give Mr. Roberts the support which his enterprise and worth deserve. They can afford to be liberal to give him unstinted moral as well as financial support. By this means the Evening News under the management of Messrs. Roberts & Truesdell will become an important factor in building up the social and business interests of Moorhead.

A DASTARDLY ATTACK ON MR. BENNETT

The Beloit Outlook of Tuesday, contains one of the most libelous and unmanly attacks on John R. Bennett that was ever published on any man in this country. Nothing but total ignorance of the character of the gentleman he attacks, or a malicious desire to do him a gross wrong, can possibly account for the appearance of such an article. It attacks Mr. Bennett in the most cowardly manner, and insinuates that he is dishonest, a man not fit to go upon the bench, one whom his neighbors would not trust, and one who would connive at wrong. It would make an honorable man blush with shame to write these things of such a man as John R. Bennett, and we take it for granted that the editors of the Outlook did not blush and had no compunction of conscience, when he hurled that dart of malice at Mr. Bennett.

The people of Rock county, where Mr. Bennett has lived and practiced law for thirty-four years, should over-whelmingly rebuke such a malignant and cowardly assault. Mr. Bennett's integrity cannot be impeached. He is a man worthy of the fullest confidence of every voter, and a gentleman who would honor and dignity the bench. In his own city, he enjoys the respect of his fellow-citizens with whom his credit is as good as the men who are writing the scurrilous circulars and editorials about him. Let the voters of Rock county do their duty by casting their votes for Mr. Bennett, and give him the election which he so highly deserves.

MORE ABOUT JUDGE CONGER'S "I WON'T AND I WILL."

Every fair-minded and reasonable man seems to be unutterably surprised at the somersault Judge Conger has taken in regard to the judicial question. It strikes the public with all the more astonishment because it was supposed that Judge Conger could not be seduced by the flattering of any faction to break faith with Mr. Bennett, nor make a playing out of his own letter of declination. The people of Rock county are not only astonished at the Judge's strange conduct, but the State Journal of Wednesday, says:

"In the Twelfth circuit, Hon. H. S. Conger is the present incumbent. Several months ago he announced that he would not be a candidate for another election, as, after twelve years' service, he desired relief. In this condition of affairs, the friends of John R. Bennett, Esq., got up an extensive call for him to become a candidate for the position of circuit judge, and Mr. Bennett accepted this call, and is a candidate before the people. Until within a day or two, he seemed to have no opposition, and it was supposed he would be unanimously elected, a compliment he richly deserves, both on account of his ability as a lawyer and of his superior character as a man. But now comes Judge Conger before the public with a card, announcing his willingness to be a candidate for re-election. While Judge Conger is a good judge, and no doubt would have been re-elected, without opposition, had he not, as was understood, peremptorily withdrawn from the field as a candidate, we trust, under the circumstances, the people will elect John R. Bennett. He will make an equally competent judge, and deserves the election, having been brought into the contest under the impression that Judge Conger would not run. When an officer publishes to the world that he does not desire a re-election, and from that fact other good men enter the field as candidates, it is not fair, at the last day, for the incumbent to change his position and become his competitor for the place. Before a positive declination is made, a man should consider well the situation, and when he takes the position, should stick to it. This is simple justice to gentlemen who may become candidates for the place, because of a declination. Mr. Bennett would probably not have been a candidate against Judge Conger, had not that gentleman declined a re-election.

"In view of the situation, we trust Mr. Bennett will be sustained by the people of the district and made their Circuit Judge. If such is the case, they will secure the services of an able, just and good man for that important judicial position."

THE LEGISLATURE.

Special to the Gazette.

MADISON, March 30.—The Legislature will finally adjourn to-morrow noon, after a session of eighty days. The session of last year was eighty-three days, but the average for thirteen years past has been sixty-seven days. About three hundred and twenty-five bills have passed both houses, out of about nine hundred and fifty introduced. The total appropriations of the session has been six hundred and seventy-five thousand two hundred and fifty-four dollars, against two hundred and eighty-three thousand last year; but the sums voted for enlarging the capitol, for the industrial school for girls, and the deficiency in the State institutions have caused the excess.

To-day has been wholly devoted to holding mock sessions, and a great deal of hilarity prevailed.

This session has been more noted for killing bills and for long-winded debates than any known at the capitol for many years.

MADISON, March 29.—The Assembly to-day passed a bill, which was concurred in by the Senate, taxing telegraph companies as follows: For the first wire $1 per mile; for the second wire, 50 cents per mile; for the third wire, 25 cents per mile; for the fourth wire, 20 cents per mile.

The Senate committee on finance introduced a bill to-day, which passed both houses, levying a State tax of $500,000 for the year 1882. Owing to the large number of special appropriations made at this session, the State tax for next year is double the amount levied for the year 1882. When the bill was under consideration in the Assembly Mr. Price took occasion to charge extravagance in State affairs, and gave as his opinion that the expense of the State could be cut down $100,000 without detriment to any public interest.

The Assembly bill, creating a bureau of labor statistics for the purpose of which thousands of workmen have petitioned, was refused a third reading in the Senate. The vote was nine yeas to nineteen nays.

The Assembly concurred in the joint resolution asking for reform in making appointments to office by making fitness the sole requisite, and forbidding assessments for political purposes, and adopted the Senate resolution for final adjournment on Friday.

A TERRIBLE DISASTER.

Special to the Gazette.

MEMPHIS, March 31.—The steamboat Golden Gate, of the Southern transportation line, bound from New Orleans for Cincinnati, was burned at 4:30 this morning, with great loss of life. When approaching the wharf at this city, it was discovered to be on fire by Robert Kelly, second engineer, who gave the alarm, and stuck to his post till out of the flames. Captain Bryce and Pilot Parcell were on watch and headed the boat for the shore, and in four minutes she touched the wharf at the foot of Beale street. The line was thrown ashore, but the current was so swift the line broke and the blazing vessel floated down stream, carrying the helpless passengers and crew with her, of whom many were lost. She carried 40 cabin passengers, 15 of whom were ladies, and 9 children, and a crew of 60. The fire originated in a lot of jute.

Among the victims are Dr. Monahan and wife, of Jackson, Ohio; Mrs. and Miss Cary, Cincinnati; W. W. Stow, wife and two children; A. Wood and wife, Kentucky; Mrs. Anna Smith, Massachusetts; Miss Campbell, Mrs. Purcell, Mrs. L. E. Konniz and three children.

LATER.

MEMPHIS, March 30.—It is estimated that 35 lives were lost by the burning of the Golden Gate. Of these 23 were ladies, and only two are known to have been saved.

Stowe's circus was aboard, and six cages of animals, and all the tents and wagons, and horses were lost. The boat was valued at $51,000. The bulk lies sunk three miles below the city. The list of the lost is not obtainable, as all the books were burned.

AT HIS OLD TRICKS.

New York, March 29.—About two weeks ago Mr. Freeborn G. Smith, the piano manufacturer, was swindled out of $175 on a bogus check by a man who called on him at his factory in Brooklyn, and represented himself to be Richard H. Colquitt, a planter, and brother of Governor A. H. Colquitt, of Georgia. It now turns out that the swindler was Franklin J. Moses, ex-Governor of South Carolina. During the past five years he has been arrested several times by the police of this city and accused of forgery and fraud. On each of these occasions convincing evidence of his guilt was produced in court, but in his promise to reform the prosecution came to a standstill and he was released on bail. Upon his discharge Moses, instead of reforming, would continue at his old tricks until his arrest was again ordered. The detective arrested him at Broadway and Twenty-second street, and took him to a police headquarters, where he was held on the charge of passing worthless and forged checks. The prisoner was taken to the Tombs Police court in the afternoon, and was remanded by the magistrate at the request of the detectives.

DR. LAMSON'S CASE.

WASHINGTON, March 29.—The case of Dr. Lamson, recently sentenced to death by an English court for the murder of his brother-in-law, to-day assumed an important phase here. The President having referred the petition of New York citizens in behalf of Dr. Lamson to the attorney general for his opinion, Mr. Brewster sent to the President a communication in reply, in which the opinion is given that the Executive is authorized to take action to the extent prayed for, namely: That the British Government be requested to cause a stay of execution of the sentence upon Dr. Lamson until this country relative to the alleged conspiracy or hereditary insanity of the prisoner. From an authentic source it is learned that Secretary Frelinghuysen has sent a cable dispatch to Minister Lowell, instructing the latter to make application to the British Government for the stay of proceedings prayed for by the New York petitioners.

No Humbugging the American People.

You can't humbug the American people, when they find a remedy that snits them; they use it and recommend it to their friends. Just exactly the case with SPRING BLOSSOM which has become a household word all over the United States. Price 50 cents; trial bottles, 10 cents. For sale by A. J. Roberts and Sherer & Co.

A DEMOCRAT CAUCUS.

MILWAUKEE, March 27.—One interesting phase after another is added to the local canvass in rapid succession. There was a terrific pugilistic encounter at the Fourteenth Ward Democratic caucus this evening, by which the meeting was broken up. The row was caused by the appearance of several individuals who do not reside in the ward, but who insisted upon voting at the caucus. Three men had their faces cut and bruised in a most painful manner. The more respectable element fled in dismay, and the chairman announced that the meeting stood adjourned until Saturday. There is a report upon the streets that the leaders of the trades assembly have struck for the sum of $1,000 as personal compensation for effecting the trade by which the Workingmen's party endorsed the Democratic candidate, or agreed to put up the same candidate for mayor. It is added that they will not attempt to hold the trades assembly people together unless the money is promptly paid. The business element of the Democratic party is completely disgusted with the disgraceful dike. A union man writes a card to one of the papers stating that he will not do anything to aid the election of a Democrat to office, for the reason that the Republican party has always sacredly guarded the right of the laboring classes, whereas the Democracy has been the champion of slavery and serfdom. Governor Ludington, the Republican nominee for mayor, is conducting the campaign in his happiest mood, and with that vigor which has characterized his successful career in politics as well as in business. His election is about as well assured as anything of the kind can be.

COLLYER AND CHICAGO.

New York, March 29.—With reference to the dispatch that the Rev. Robert Collyer was about to return to Chicago, his family say that certainly before he started for Chicago he did not dream of resigning his pastorate of the Church of the Messiah, and if he subsequently entertained so important a change, he would have telegraphed to his family. He is expected home on Saturday next.

120 DROWNED.

NATCHEZ, Miss., March 29.—Information has reached this city, of the destruction of the Ralston gin, near Lake St. John, Tensas Parish, La., by which 120 refugees lost their lives. This gin was one of the largest in Northern Louisiana, and was packed to overflowing with negroes from adjoining plantations.

A German Silver Wedding.

On this Sunday there was evidently something unusual afloat. People clung like swarming bees about the doors of the baker's house, where swung the blue wooden sign, displaying the usual white coffee-pot and the lavish assortment of fancy bread, painted with primitive notions of perspective, wreathed for the occasion with laurel and bay, as if the postly baker had just returned from a glorious military campaign. I noticed that the ladies of the party pushed bravely to the narrow doorway, while the gentlemen lingered more shyly outside, whispering together, and nudging each other to enter first. Every one was in gala dress, and turned pleasant brown faces to greet me as I entered the baker's house, which is built, as are all the farm-houses of North Germany (for the baker had some land of his own to farm), in two parts—that is to say, a long brick-floored hall divides the living rooms, which open upon it on one side, from the stalls for horses and cows, which are ranged on the other. The chief work of the house is done in this big, open hall. The women wash their clothes and the girls cook and iron at the stove in the corner, while the cows and the customers look on from opposite sides, for the shop, the parlor, and the sleeping rooms of the family all open on the hall. This arrangement affords rare opportunities for gossiping with all the old women who look in, ostensibly to fetch their daily loaves of black bread, a yard long, and as hard as a brickbat. But on this occasion a long table occupies the center of the hall, spread with all sorts of unusual delicacies. Six or eight brown smoked hams, and as many long, blue-black sausages; piles of bread and butter and gingerbread; flat cakes sprinkled with cinnamon and sugar; square cakes full of raisins, or a terrible danger to unwary teeth—fresh cherries, with an unnatural preponderance of stones, which have a knack of imbedding themselves where they are least expected, in the soft corners of a wedge-shaped slice. The table was garnished with huge bouquets of flowers—asters, fuchsias, and larkspur—which had been contributed by all the neighbors, and accounted for the generally cropped appearance of all the gardens in the village.—The Argosy.

How a Man Became Insane.

The Hermit of the Troy (N. Y.) Times, writes: A large number of lunatics in our asylums are the victims of their own misconduct. Almost any man can make himself a lunatic if he pursues the direct method. There are hundreds and perhaps thousands in this city driving themselves to madness, gambling, speculation, and hard drinking will undermine the strongest intellects. A young man of my acquaintance has lately been sent to a lunatic asylum, who was a few years ago so promising as to obtain an important appointment. He abused his position, became suddenly a gambler, and a rake as well as a defaulter. Such a course of vice destroyed his reason, and he is one of the innumerable.

The same idea is advanced by Hogarth, who finished the "Rake's Progress," by the scene in the mad-house. During the last five years large numbers have been carried to the asylum the victims of speculation. The love of pleasure and the haste to get rich have done a fearful work. The intellect has been over-driven to its limit, and perhaps remain in hopeless prostration. It may be added, that the increase of insanity since the opening of the present year is of unparalleled degree. More than 500 cases have been reported during this brief interval, and hence it is not surprising that the asylums are more than full. The attention of the public has been called to this subject by the press, and additional room must be provided. We must either abate that furious intemperance which is driving so many to madness, or we must double our asylums all through the State.

Potato Cultivation.

The potato was discussed at a meeting of the Central New York Farmers' Club. The facts developed in the experience of farmers present were that though soil and season unquestionably have much to do with the flavor of potatoes, the late potatoes retain their flavor over winter and into spring better than early sorts. Professor Roberts found that under the same conditions, small potatoes for seed gave the poorest result, the middle part of large potatoes next, the seed potatoes next, and the seed end the best. A whole large potato with a single eye is the best possible seed. More work is needed, but a better crop secured by cultivating in rows or drilling, rather than in hills.

English Flunkysism.

A late English paper says that the inherent flunkysism of English society was curiously illustrated at a recent fair in London. Princesses and "professional beauties" had agreed to keep stalls in fancy dresses, and the crowd which rushed to see them was so immense that it was impossible to move about, difficult to see anything, and the doors were closed to prevent a catastrophe. Nobody had any pleasure, but everybody was tired and ill-tempered, and brought away a few ridiculous things which they had not wanted, and for which they had paid absurdly extravagant prices. Yet the fair yielded nearly forty thousand dollars, and the paper sarcastically advises the managers of "Hospital Sunday" to engage a few princesses and beauties to hold the plates, and to be sure and advertise freely. It might be well to provide that nobody should be admitted to divine worship on that Sunday, who did not agree in advance to put a guinea on the plate. But that is probably needless. Franklin emptied his pockets when he heard Whitefield's pathetic appeals; and no true Briton could refuse a guinea to a plate held by a princess or a "professional beauty." Flunkys love a lull. But we know no more amusing illustration of it than a sermon that we lately saw, preached a hundred and twenty years ago. The clerical flunk is the most uncommon, but he is the most disagreeable of the kind. We get glimpses of him at the levees of prime ministers at the very period to which the sermon belongs. They went begging for performance, and were ready to do what was necessary to get it. Thackeray devotes three papers of his great book to clerical snobs. He would have enjoyed the one who composed and delivered this sermon, which was in commemoration of that precious ornament of his species, to whom Thackeray himself has done justice, King George II. It is edifying to turn from Herve's memoirs of the court of that monarch, and from Thackeray's legend for his statue, to the sermon delivered at Nassau Hall, January 14, 1761, on the death of his late majesty, King George II.

"George is no more!" saith the preacher, "George, the Mighty, the Just, the Gentle and the Wise; George, the Father of Britain and her Colonies, the Guardian of Laws and Liberty, the Protector of the Oppressed, the Arbitrator of Europe, the Terror of Tyrants and France; George, the Friend of Man, the Benefactor of Millions, is no more! Millions tremble at the alarm. Britain expresses her sorrow in National Groans and Europe re-echoes to the melancholy sound; the melancholy sound circulates far and wide. This remote American Continent shares in the loyal sympathy. The wide intermediate Atlantic rolls the Tide of Grief to these distant shores. And even the reclusive Sons of Nassau Hall feel the immense bereavement with all the sensibility of a filial heart, and must mourn with their Country, with Britain, with Europe, with the World. George was our Father too. In his Reign—a Reign so auspicious to Literature and all the Improvements of human Nature—was this Foundation laid, and the College of New Jersey received its Existence. And though, like the sun, he shone in a distant sphere, we felt (most sensibly felt) his benign influences, cherishing Science and her votaries, in this, her new-born temple."

This was the way in which the Tory pulpit worshipped the throne of earthly grace and favor a hundred and twenty years ago.

A Painted Dog.

A man down in East End lavished a small slice of his bank account, the other day, in the purchase of a coach dog. He heard it was the swell go in Europe to own coach dogs. Every lord of the realm owned one. So he bought the dog at a round price, and brought him home. Next day he got out his coach, and tied the pup under it to the axle, as a preparatory step in the young canine's education.

Now there were two immensely interested spectators to the preparations for the training. Two mongrel curs non descript watching things, and seizing upon the carriage pup, they finally winked at each other, and said, in dog language, "I guess we're about one pound heavier than that brute; let's chew off his hide."

The coach started, and the coach dog, which, being attached by a chain, as a natural consequence started, too. Just as the coach was gaining impetus, the mongrel curs made a dash at the thoroughbred, and the next few seconds were fraught with frightful howls, yells, and shrieks. By the time the coacher got down to the rescue, of his bloodied pet the damage was done. The dog had plenty of coaching for one day, and he concluded he would not go another step unless the chain and axle dragged him. "S'mother day, then," said the owner, and he ran his coach into the stable, and put his pup on ice to cool off. Next day was but a repetition of the former day's trouble. The mongrels were "laying" for the high-fangled quadruped, and they licked him again.

It now became a matter of fighting two dogs with one, rather than training a coacher, and the gentleman grew despondent. One day last week he met a friend. A happy thought struck him. Would his friend lend him that bulldog for just one day? He would. Bull was then taken to the coacher's house, and an artist called in. Brush and paint were brought into use, and in less than a jiffy Bull was a fac simile of the coach dog. Without waiting for the paint to dry on Bull's hide, the experimenter hied him off, as rigged up his coach. Then Bull was let out and tied to the axle without a chain, but a web bit of string that wouldn't embarrass him in case of an assault from an unknown foe.

The two mongrel dogs, as usual, were watching things with smiles upon their benign faces. Said one: "Well, the gol darned fool! does he want us to eat that there dog?"

"I guess we might as well kill him this time," said the other, licking his chops.

"Might as well chew off a couple of his legs, at least," said the first, "for he'll never tame till we do. Look out; here he comes!"

Then they jumped on him. Such yelling as that which followed fast and furious was never heard before. This time the driver did not leave his seat to interfere. The painted thing under the wagon seemed able to take care of himself. In two minutes by the clock he had chawed one leg off the southeast corner of the largest mongrel, and had pulled an ear out by the roots from the head of the other. While Bull was picking off flesh with his claws and spitting out blood and hair, the wounded combatants dragged their gory carcasses from the field, trying to gather bewildered senses enough to wonder what that dog all at once.

And now that coach dog goes out every day, and when he prances on the street every dog on the square goes in and creeps under the house for fear he will get sunstruck.

Covered With Gold.

It is a curious fact that Russia, one of the poorest of civilized countries, makes a greater parade of wealth in one respect than any other state. The domes of all the great churches in St. Petersburg, Moscow, and other large towns, are plated with gold nearly one-quarter of an inch thick. The new church of the Savior represents a value of fully $15,000,000. The Isaac Cathedral in St. Petersburg may be safely credited with at least twice that amount. So strong, however, is the old Slav belief in the inviolable sanctuaries of "holy places," that, during countless seasons of widespread and bitter distress, no attempt has ever been made to plunder the gold thus temptingly exposed. Indeed, one of the finest churches in St. Petersburg, the Kazan Cathedral, owes its massive shrine to the plunder taken by the Cossacks in 1812.

"Angeline, my dear, you should not sit on the veranda in the edge of the evening. You will contract malaria," said a careful mother. "I know it, ma," was the cheerful reply. "That is what I'm trying to do. All our set have malaria. It is quite the idea, I assure you." What could mamma say?—[New Haven Reg.]

GENS OF THOUGHT.

THE passions are the voice of the body. A MAN of thought is willing to die, willing to live.

WHAT loneliness is more lonely than distrust? PROSPERITY makes some friends and many enemies.

ALL that is human must retrograde if it do not advance. NOTHING dies so hard and rallies so often as intolerance.

GOOD manners and good morals are sworn friends and firm allies. WE SHOULD believe only in works; words are sold for nothing everywhere.

NATURE never moves by jumps, but always in steady and supported advances. IT is easy enough to forgive your enemies, if you have not the means to harm them.

THE worst prison is not of stone. It is of a throbbing heart, outraged by an infamous life.

TRUTH never turns to rebuke falsehood; her own straightforwardness is the severest correction. AS soon go kindle fire with snow, as seek to quench the fire flame with words.—Shakespeare.

NEGLECTED calamity soon expires; show that you are hurt, and you give it the appearance of truth.

LET us enjoy the fugitive hour. Man has no harbor, time has no shore; it rushes on and carries us with it.

WE ARE not what we are, nor do we treat or esteem each other for such, but for that we are capable of being.

NOTHING makes the earth seem so spacious as to have friends at a distance; they make the latitudes and longitudes.

MARK this well, ye proud men of action! Ye are, after all, nothing but unconscious instruments of the men of thought.

I AM yet apt to think that men find their simple ideas agree, though in discourse they confound one another with different names.

If any one says that he has seen a just man in want of bread, I answer that it was in some place where there was no other just man.

SOCIETY is a more level surface than we imagine. Wise men or absolute fools are hard to be met with, as there are few giants or dwarfs.

SONGS of departed glory are the privilege of a conquered people, and prophetic hopes are a consolation seldom wanting to the oppressed.

LIFE is like a game of whist. I don't enjoy the game much, but I like to play my cards well, and see what will be the end of it.—George Eliot.

I THINK most readers of Shakespeare sometimes find themselves thrown into exalted mental conditions like those produced by music.—Holmes.

WHERE necessity ends, curiosity begins; and no sooner are we supplied with everything that nature can demand, than we sit down to contrive artificial appetites.—Johnson.

THE infinite bliss of nature is felt in every vein. The light life of the summer blossoms in heart and brain.

OTHER rules vary; this is the only one you will find without exception: that in this world the salary or reward is always in the reverse ratio of the duties performed.

NO way has been found for making heroism easy, even for the scholar. Labor, iron labor, is for him. The world was created as an audience for him; the atoms of which it is made are opportunities.

It is asserted by M. Emile de Lavallée that the world's available supply of the so-called precious metals is rapidly diminishing, and, while it may not soon become exhausted, the time cannot be far hence when it will become inadequate to meet all demands upon it. It can hardly be hoped that the lack can be filled by new discoveries for any extended period, as the quantities existing at the earth's surface can at best be very limited, although vast masses probably exist in the inaccessible interior of the globe. It is computed that the world is five times as heavy as an equal volume of water, while the rocks of the earth's surface only average two and one-half times the weight of water. It follows from this that the still molten center must contain a great amount of very heavy substances. With water as a unit, the specific gravity, or comparative weight of gold is about 19, platinum 21, and iridium 22, silver being 10 and iron 8. When the globe was in a liquid state these metals would have had a tendency to gravitate toward the center, and those of extreme density now found by us owe their appearance near the surface to volcanic agencies. The great bulk must yet remain near the center.

Don't Throw up the Sponge.

A Studious Inventor.

Ransom Cook, who died at Saratoga, last summer, was master of twenty-nine trades, and owner of seventeen patents. Among the latter was one for the improvement in the manufacture of wrought iron and steel cannon. This idea was appropriated by Sir William Armstrong, who made both fame and fortune out of it. Among the other patents was one for a hydraulic apparatus for producing a blast, for an improved electro-magnetic ore separator (made by Mr. Cook when 80 years old) an improvement in blast pipes for carrying heated air and gases to furnaces, an improvement in scissars, an improved boring instrument known as the "Cook Auger," an improved machine for turning the lips of augers, an improved bit for boring wood, an improvement in ventilating and excluding dust from railway cars, an improved exhaust fan, and an improvement in the mode of straining saws for saw-mills. There were several others of more or less importance. Some of his inventions, particularly the patent auger, were very profitable. He was making a machine and wanted an auger that would bore at an angle with the grain without starting with a gouge. He hit upon the idea of examining the tips of the worm commonly known as the wood-borer, with a microscope, and from this he made his auger, which was very successful. His work, which was a curiosity, He made all his own models, and had engines and machinery well adapted to the purpose. He has also accumulated one of the most complete and valuable collections of scientific and mechanical books in the country.
